THE TROSSACHS, GLEN FINGLAS. The view shows that unrivalled mingling of purple crag, oak copse and green herbage which we call the "Trossachs," or the "bristly country." Not only are the hill-sides aglow with light purple, but the rocks and even the roads are tinged with the same hue. Glen Finglas is traversed by the Turk. The scenery is wild and romantic, and the glen is the scene of an incident in Scott's "Lady of the Lake."

How is my Treasures - Man today? Have thought of you many times. Had a fine voyage over. Hope everything is well with you. The weather has been cold here.
With all good wishes
